First of all I believe over all that our group worked well together to achieve the task at hand. The first thing we did in our group was to set up a way that we could communicate, which was through a group chat on facebook. Setting up meetings throughout the weeks seemed to be easy enough as most of our timetables were fairly similar and each group member did not have many other commitments that they needed to attend.

With the work relating to the project, almost everytime the project was worked on, we were together. This meant that we could all have a say in what was being done and all be up to date on what was written in the programme. In our group, we had one person writing down the code at a time and the rest of us would bounce ideas, provide help in code and test the robots progress. The work I believe was all divided fairly even over the whole project meaning that everyone was happy with their own workload and contribution. Personally the contribution that I thought I made was good and even with everyone else in the project group.

I found that working with a group for this project meant that our programmes outcome was a lot more effective than something that I would've done individually. I believe this because when we would get stuck on a problem, as a group, we could brainstorm an idea and work together to find a solution. Overall I thought that my groups work on this project was a success and that our group worked well together
